A Message from State's Attorney Bob Harvey

As Calvert County State's Attorney, I am responsible for prosecuting all individuals who have been charged with a crime or serious motor vehicle offense in the county. I take this responsibility very seriously because our quality of life depends upon it. It has been my privilege to serve the citizens of Calvert County.

Our county has one of the lowest crime rates in the State of Maryland. I intend to do my part to keep it that way. But I can't do it alone. Public safety requires a community effort. Everyone must get involved. Public safety begins at home and extends into the community through our schools, churches, and civic organizations.

Please join me in continuing to keep Calvert County a safe place to live, work, and raise a family.

Thank you,
Bob Harvey

Planners Endorse Prince Frederick Loop Road Option

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The Calvert County Planning Commission has taken steps to designate the preferred loop road for the eastern section of the Prince Frederick Town Center.

Planning Commission Administrator Tamara Blake-Wallace explained at the Oct. 19 meeting, “The county is currently reviewing plans for two proposed residential development projects to be located on the south side of Fox Run Boulevard between Dares Beach Road and existing Chesapeake Boulevard. This section of Fox Run Boulevard is currently unbuilt except for a small segment that extends off of Dares Beach Road that serves as the entrance to Calvert High School. The proposed residential development projects are known as Magnolia Ridge (CSPR-142742), consisting of 164 townhouses and 96 apartments and Magnolia Ridge West (CSPR-142828), consisting of 79 townhouses. Both projects are under the same ownership and being designed by Barrett & Associates, LLC.”

Blake-Wallace further explained in a memo to the commission that the Prince Frederick Town Center Zoning Ordinance has a map that offers two options for an eastern loop road. She explained, “One option for the loop road alignment includes extending Chesapeake Boulevard south of Fox Run Boulevard to Dares Beach Road. The design and construction of Chesapeake Boulevard south, however, would be difficult since it would require extensive grading of moderate to steep slopes and most likely involve two or more stream crossings. Another option for the loop road alignment would be the completion of Fox Run Boulevard to Dares Beach Road as currently platted. This option would bring Fox Run Boulevard in alignment with the intersection of Dares Beach Road and Fairground Road.”

After listening to a presentation from developer Rodney Gertz of Quality Built Homes and his engineering consultant, the planners went along with the request.

The decision came just after another presentation, a request from the county regarding Fox Run Blvd.

Environmental Planner Colleen Anglin explained the request for grading and clearing prior to road plan approval involving the unbuilt segment of Fox Run Blvd., which is a variable width public right-of-way. She said, “Conceptual Road design plans for the unbuilt section of Fox Run Blvd. are currently under review. The proposed road construction is included in the Capital Improvement Plan (CIP), but final design approval and construction responsibilities are yet to be determined.”

She said the county Project Engineer Jason Leavitt submitted a request for an exception to the town center zoning ordinance to allow the grading prior to the road plan approval.

She said the Department of Public Works (DPW) made the request “to allow for the removal of excess fill dirt within and adjacent to the unbuilt section of the right-of-way. Approval of the request will not only help expedite the completion of the road but enable DPW to utilize the fill dirt on other on-going county construction projects at a significant cost savings.”

The planners approved that request, but there was some pushback.

David Bu of Breezy Point said there’s a question about whether the entire loop road is needed. “If it turns out that we don’t,” he noted, “then why are we building this extension? The sole function of that extension then becomes enabling the residential development that’s proposed right adjacent and puts the county in the position of taxpayer funding what’s essentially a road servicing a new residential development. So that’s an awkward political situation that I’d like you to consider.”

But Deputy Public Works Director J.R. Cosgrove rebutted, “Everybody can look at this and assume that Fox Boulevard is going to be built. We’re just trying to go get the dirt and grade it sooner so we can use (if for) the different projects. Is that a false assumption? Not necessarily. This is a capital project that’s been in the books for over a decade.”

And Gertz said the completion of Fox Run Blvd. will provide an alternate route for Calvert High School so traffic can avoid the busy Dares Beach Road/Route 4 intersection

Could Lower Bridge Speed Construction?

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

“Does it have to fall into the water?” Commissioner Mike Hart was asking out loud how long it would take to get a new Gov. Thomas Johnson Bridge. His audience was Deputy Secretary of the Maryland Department of Transportation (MDOT) Earl Lewis, filling in for the secretary, who was ill. Lewis had in tow the heads of the various MDOT departments at the agency’s annual visit to the county on Oct. 25.

Lewis answered Hart by admitting, “Unfortunately, I do not have an answer to that question.”

State Highway Administration (SHA) Administrator Tim Smith said there may be some funding for suicide prevention, but he added, “We are moving forward with planning efforts, to look at opportunities with the Navy on whether we need to have the bridge up as high as it does. I think moving in that direction unlocks some potential opportunities. And then, let’s be honest, in the bipartisan infrastructure bill there’s discretionary funding out there as well. So, while I’m not going to give you a date, I think we’re more optimistic that we can move forward with the planning and design side of this, especially if we can lower that bridge, than we did in the past.”

The MDOT officials touted the recent opening of the replacement Nice/Middleton Bridge over the Potomac River three months ahead of schedule and on budget. That bridge cost $435 million while the price tag for the Solomons bridge tops $1 billion with the road improvements needed on either side of the bridge.

But it was pointed out that the Potomac bridge is a toll bridge and Hart noted that residents have resisted that idea. He said that unlike the Nice/Middleton Bridge, people travel the bridge every day to work and shop.

Lewis said of the Hogan Administration, “We’ve improved 100 percent of the state’s highway system, making our roads and bridges much safer and less congested. Of the 69 poorly rated bridges we identified in 2015, we have replaced or repaired all of them. We are continuing to address aging infrastructure. We now have only 26 poorly rated bridges. That’s an historical low. All these bridges are now either under construction, funded for construction or in design.”

Lewis also highlighted litter prevention. He said, “Trash litter along our highways cost us all some serious dough -- more than $60 million over the last eight years, when averaged that’s more than $7 million a year. Think about all that waste.”

Lewis said the signs that pop up along state highways on weekends are illegal, but enforcement is a matter of funding the weekend help.

Proposed County Code Change Aimed at Transparency

By Dick Myers
 Staff Writer

Based on the desire of the Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) to enhance the transparency of county government, County Attorney John Norris has developed a proposed addition to the county code. It would, according to Norris, “Outline roles and responsibilities of the parties to a request for public records.” After a presentation from Norris at the Oct. 25 BOCC meeting, it was agreed to solicit public comment before taking the proposal to a public hearing. Norris said he would additionally reach out to organizations which in the past have complained about lack of transparency.

Norris explained, “The Public Information Act is a state law that was adopted to grant the public broad rights of access to records, balancing that right with the protection of legitimate governmental interests and safety and security, and the privacy of individual citizens.”

He added that the Public Information Act doesn’t require any government agency to create a record that doesn’t exist.

He said, “There is a presumption though, that I need to file a public information request to find out what time the transfer stations close on the weekends, or open on the holiday. Those are not public information requests. Those can be handled with a telephone call and don’t require the formality of going through a response. Public Information Act is according to the Attorney General, based on the enduring principle that public knowledge of government activities is critical to the functioning of a democratic society. So public information requests give you access to records of what the government is doing, what it has done, sometimes what it might be planning to do.”

The code addition Norris developed sets up the procedures for making public information requests. He said, “A person can request a record by submitting a written request to the custodian.” If it’s submitted to the wrong person, whoever gets it is required to forward it to the correct person. Each department has a records custodian.

Norris said, “If the custodian grants the request for a record, they’ll produce that record as soon as possible, immediately in some instances. For instance, the Department of Planning and Zoning has identified records that are commonly requested and make them available at the front counter without having to submit a written request.”

As for the cost of a records search, Norris said, “The first two hours are free and then everything else is paid for...at the hourly rate for the employees that are fulfilling the request.”

He added, “Each director is going to develop a proactive disclosure policy of records that are available for inspection as planning and zoning has already done for some.”

A View From The BLEACHERS

62...MEH

By Ronald N. Guy Jr.

It was 1998, impossibly 24 years ago now. As summer charged into fall, the days would start early – had to. With a long commute and work day, it was imperative to clock in just after the sun turned night into day. Things were going to happen in the night – big things, historic things, things I’d be writing about nearly a quarter-century later – that could not be missed. This being a time long before recorded, instant-advancing programming, my derriere had to be on the couch, in front of the television by 7 p.m. – no compromise.

The daily ritual that September and early October looked something like this. An alarm clock would start the day with a piercing pulse that hurt – psychologically and physically. In desperate need of smelling salts and a standing eight count, I would stumble into the shower semi-conscious. The cobwebs would clear as I shuffled to my truck. Did I shave? Did I use both soap and shampoo? Did I use soap on my head and shampoo on my body? Whatever – efficiency mattered more than hygiene.

I would exit the driveway by six, rip through the gears while hauling down Route 4 and report to work by seven. This would ensure an exit by 5 p.m. and a return home an hour later – just enough time to eat, select a beer and land punctually on that aforementioned couch. The day would end deep into the night and sometimes into the next morning. Then insufficient sleep. Then that obnoxious alarm...again.

It was a fabulous grind.

The carrot this rabbit was chasing was baseball history. Mark McGwire of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Sammy Sosa of the Chicago Cubs were conducting an epic assault on Roger Maris’s single-season home run record. Every night baseball history was under siege, then being re-written. By September 8, McGwire had broken the record with his 62nd home run; he ended the season with 70. Sosa was neck-and-neck with McGwire down the stretch and finished a close second in this magical run with 66.

We know now that it was too good to be...natural.

Maris hit 61 bombs in 1961 to best Babe Ruth’s 1927 record of 60. By 1998, Maris’s record had stood several seasons longer than Ruth’s and had, until the late 1990s, never been threatened. In fact, until 1997, no major leaguer had hit more than 52 home runs since George Foster recorded that number in 1977. Then everything changed. Between 1997 and 2001, McGwire, Sosa and Barry Bonds alone recorded seven seasons of 58 or more homers. Peak ridiculousness arrived in 2001, when Bonds, at age 36 and having never hit more than 49 home runs in a season, launched 73. Soon enough, the disgusting realities of the steroid error – an abject failure of the sport – claimed all innocence.

Eventually Aaron Judge, circa 2022, was going to happen – a guy having a spectacular season who threatened Roger Maris’s record – and, with it, so would a forced confrontation with baseball’s willful and pathetic tarnishing of its most cherished records. Judge hit 62 home runs this season, officially setting a new American League record; but for many purists (and those for whom character matters), Judge is now the all-time single-season home run king.

That it is unclear how to judge Judge, that his march to 62 was more “meh” than a captivating experience rivaling 1998, that I lost no sleep or adhered to no strict routine to catch his at bats, is the consequence of a sport and a generation of athletes that lost all ethical mooring. The steroid era eviscerated the statistical baseline, cheated history, disrespected players of the past, undermined players of the present and future, and spoiled the experience for fans. The best that can be said of bandits like Bonds, McGwire and Sosa, and complicit, money-drunk executives and owners, is this: theirs is a cautionary tale of the inescapable permanence of ethical compromise, of silence in the face of perversion, and of personal and institutional dishonor.

For everything Judge did right this summer, his incredible accomplishment was unfairly minimized by a sport that once did so much unforgivably wrong.

The Way We Were...

HISTORY AND STORIES OF ST MARY'S COUNTY FROM LONG AGO TO JUST YESTERDAY

THE UNSOLVED ASSASSINATION OF “THE ANGEL OF ST. MARY’S”

On the morning January 7th, 1933, 73-year old Miss Ida Kirk, a wealthy spinster and philanthropist, known variously as the “Angel of St. Mary’s County” and the “Angel of Budd’s Cree”, along with her friend, Mrs. Elva Gibson, wife of Rev. Joseph P. Gibson, Rector of Christ Church in Chaptico, set off from the Christ Church rectory in Miss Kirk’s car headed to Washington.

A mile and a half down Chaptico Road (Rt 238) from the rectory and travelling at 30 mph, the car exploded. Miss Kirk was gravely injured, her body mangled from the waist down. Mrs. Gibson sustained little more than a twisted ankle.

Ida Kirk died two-days later in St. Mary’s Hospital. The case remains unsolved to today. Who would want to harm this generous spinster – and why?

The cause of the explosion was determined to have been dynamite attached to the car. It could have been rigged only by someone familiar with blasting. Investigators found that at least one stick of dynamite had been set under the floorboards on the driver’s side. It was set-off, possibly by a fuse wired to the tailpipe along with gunpowder extracted from multiple shotgun shells. When the tailpipe heated, the gunpowder acted as a “cap” and ignited the fuse. A pre-mediated and carefully planned assassination.

Suspicion immediately turned to John Gross, 45, a “stump-dynamiter” as Washington’s “Sunday Star” called him the day after the incident. Miss Kirk had ordered Gross to leave her home about a week earlier having found him in the company of her maid. According to reports, the man left in “obvious anger”. However, no firm evidence could be found to charge him with the crime – although, based solely on his skill handling explosives, he appeared to be a prime suspect.

Another theory held that that Reverend Gibson had some sort of grievance against Miss Kirk. West Lyon, a retired farmer living in Chaptico and who arrived on the scene about twenty-minutes after the blast, said that, “They found the cut gun shell and some copper wire used to make the (dynamite) bomb in the rectory yard. It was an expert that did it.”

Ida Kirk's Angel.

However, this theory was also dismissed as it was apparent that whoever rigged the contraption had done so during the night and no motive could be found.

Finally, attention turned to Ida Kirk’s last will and testament.

After Kirk died, a dispute broke out over the legitimacy of her will. John H.T. Briscoe was the executor. Nina Semmes Folwell, a first cousin of Miss Kirk who received nothing in the will, challenged its validity. It had been written a year earlier and there were apparent differences in the typeface used in the document. The dispute continued until 1942 when Mr. Briscoe asked that a Mr. Hewitt Griggs Robertson, a lawyer representing some of the beneficiaries, be allowed to work with him to settle the estate, at Briscoe’s expense.

Ida Kirk asked in the will that a life-sized marble statue of a guardian angel be placed in her family’s lot at the Christ Church cemetery. The memorial still stands and can be found to the rear of the church.

Ida Kirk. The Angel of St. Mary’s County.

THE TACKLE BOX FISHING REPORT

By Ken Lamb
Contributing Writer

It was a cool September and a cooler October so far, so we have the perfect conditions for a super rockfish season. The stripers are in the Potomac and Patuxent in good numbers and size. Lure casters in kayaks and bigger boats are finding fish both blind casting around structure and chasing breaking fish.

Trollers are doing well with tandems and small umbrellas deep; and with single bucktails in the shallows. Number 17 and Number 18 Chrome Tony spoons trolled behind a 12 ounce in-line weight is ideal for these fish.

The consistent cool weather has cleared up the water and now the perch have fled the creeks and schooled up in the 30-to-40-foot edges. The perch are gathered around structure also, and excellent catches are being made by jiggers around the pilings of the Benedict bridge and the Solomons Bridge in the Patuxent.

The rockfish are in the Potomac in big schools on the Maryland side in the mouth of the Wicomico from Cobb Island to St. Clements Island and at Ragged Point. They are always moving and will be on one side of the river or the other on any given day. A tried-and-true technique is to get out in the river and cruise around until flocks of gulls show the location of the fish. You can troll around the fish or cast to them using bucktails, jigs, and swimming plugs. These fish are 20" to 30" with the majority about 22" to 24". The Patuxent is the same with fish scattered from Benedict to Cedar Point.

A big advantage is the Potomac's allowance of two a day, minimum 20". Maryland waters limit is one per day at 19 inch minimum.

The fishing is really good now. Let's go get 'em.

AUTUMN REFLECTIONS

I am loving the beautiful autumn golds, red, and oranges of the changing leaves...my husband not so much. Heaven forbid more than one leaf grace our front or back door area, or the concrete apron in front of our garage or they will face the wrath of the crazed man with the leaf-blowing machine.

Well, our Boston trip from two weeks ago for my cousin's son's wedding was wonderful, and my nerves got better once we were at BWI. One embarrassing moment for me was when we had to go through that TSA machine where you have to stand on the yellow feet marks and hold your arms in the air, much like the Leonardo Da Vinci drawing where the man is standing inside a circle within a square known as the "Vitruvian Man". The TSA agent said empty your pockets, so I stood in the machine with my arms upright and outstretched while holding my Chapstick, blood pressure pill, ½ an Excedrin Migraine, boarding passes, and my ID and thought I was fine and walked out quickly. Next thing I know the TSA agent says, "Hold it" and takes the wand only to my ankles. If you have seen my ankles, then you know that I have "kankles" due to RA and Lymphedema. I told the lady that there was nothing sinister stuffed in my socks that those really were my ankles. It was a little embarrassing, but we laughed about it, well...she did.

When we got to the rented VRBO house and saw my cousins Frank and Judy, and their spouses, and their extended family and two friends, it was like the decades of not seeing one another in person truly disappeared. The photo I have attached is of myself, my cousin Frank and his sister, my cousin Judy. It's just like when we were younger on my visits to New Jersey. What you can't see is that Cousin Frank was tickling mine and Judy's sides. It was like being with my brothers. The ceremony and reception was held at The Old Peabody Theatre in Peabody, Massachusetts: the oldest concrete structure in America. When I first walked up the steps I saw the gray, drab concrete walls and thought it looked so cold and industrial, but then turned and saw the beautiful layout of chairs and the handmade trellis to serve as the altar made by the groom (my cousin's son Frank, Jr.) and the beautiful flower arrangements by the bride Sarah, and her friends. And then I looked towards the reception in the back half of the huge space and saw all the fairy lights strung across the ceiling and the tables with the hand cut wood slabs and 3 vases of candles ringed with vines and thought how beautiful and warm. The bride and groom created all the centerpieces and even made the wooden gift bookmarks, etched by Sarah. It was beautiful, and a weekend I will treasure.

Something else I treasure is having my column anniversary this month. It doesn't seem like 14 years, but by gosh, I have wandered, and you all have wandered along with me with all the crazy things that come out of my head. I am still trying to get used to the new way of submitting every other week, and I know next week, like last week, I will panic and think, "Oh my gosh, I forgot to write my column this week" or, "Is this the week I am supposed to be writing?" I have adjusted my phone calendar, but I still get the anxiety.

As always, I love all your e-mails, texts, messages, and calls, and how so many of us have become true friends. And it's always fun when someone I haven't met in person says, "I feel like I know you really well, but don't remember meeting you before" then we figure out that they read this column. I look forward to all that, because as is said, "You never know what someone else, or someone in their family may be going through" and your kindnesses and encouragement, and e-mails checking on me if I miss a column mean so much to me. Life is truly an adventure, every day; sometimes it is that crazy rollercoaster that you wish would slow down, but if it wasn't a crazy adventure, then life sure would be boring...and who wants that right? So, thank you for continuing to read my first 14 column years; I'll keep going if you will.

To each new day's adventure, Shelby

CREDIT AND MANAGING YOUR FICO SCORE

What exactly is "credit"? When you obtain a credit card or a loan from a bank, you are borrowing money. The credit card company or the bank charges you interest to borrow the money. You are expected to repay the money you have borrowed with the interest. If you repay on time, you have indicated you are a trustworthy borrower and you will be deemed worthy of borrowing more money at better interest rates than others.

Why does this matter? Because for some large items that we purchase, like a car or a house, most of us cannot pay the full amount for the item up front with cash. We will have to buy the item on credit. That means that everyone needs a credit rating in order to be able to borrow money if they have to.

How do you get a credit rating? Your payment history is reported to three credit bureaus. TransUnion, Equifax and Experian are the three major credit reporting companies. If you have ever had debt you have paid off on time, like credit card debt or mortgage debt, the three major credit reporting companies have a file on you—not only that, they have given you a FICO score. FICO stands for Fair Isaac and Co., a company that helps other companies determine a person's credit risk based on a person's credit history. The FICO score is the most widely used. According to their website, FICO provides predictions of consumer behavior to help businesses make "faster, more profitable decisions." What that really means is, they give you a number and based on the number, you will or won't qualify for credit. FICO is a score that is widely used by banks and mortgage companies to determine whether you will qualify for a loan or a mortgage.

Every thirty days, each one of your creditors sends an update to the three credit reporting agencies and your credit report is updated. If you have paid your bills late, you will create a negative credit report. A bankruptcy will remain as a negative on your report for ten years.

Your credit profile and your FICO score are constantly being updated based on information the credit reporting companies receive. It is critical that you know what is in your credit report—not just with one credit bureau, but with all three.

Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, you are protected if there is inaccurate information on your credit report. You are entitled to receive your credit report annually without charge.

The FICO score gives certain weights to your credit history—for example, your payment history represents 35% of your FICO score; your amounts owed is 30%; the length of time you have had credit accounts for 15% of your FICO score, new credit is 10%, and the type of credit you have is 10%. FICO scores range between 300 and 850. Of that, you want a score around the mid-700s. The higher the FICO credit score, the better. A credit score below 600 means you are a higher credit risk—so, lenders may not want to lend to you or, if they do, they will charge higher interest to lend you money.

How do you fix your FICO score or maintain good credit?

1. On your "payment history", pay your bills on time. Late payments and collections will hurt your score. If you have missed payments, get current and stay current. Information is constantly updated so even if you have had trouble in the past, your current status as a good credit is important. You need to know that paying off a collection account will not remove it from your report—it will usually stay on your report for seven years. If you are having trouble paying your creditors, contact them and work out a payment plan—showing consistent payments to the creditors should help to repair your scores.

2. On your "amounts owed" if you owe more than 30% of your credit card's limit, your FICO score will be lowered. Try to keep your balances low. Pay off your debt rather than acquire more credit cards. DO not close credit card accounts to increase your score or open more credit card accounts just to increase the available credit you have. Those actions can lower your score.

3. If you are new to credit, don't obtain many new accounts in a short period of time—new accounts will lower your average account age which will have a larger effect on your credit score than if you didn't have a lot of credit information. Credit history must be built up over time. Open a couple of credit card accounts, pay regularly and let the history build.

4. On "new credit" be careful. Your FICO score can be lowered just by the number of inquiries for your score from multiple creditors—even if they do not extend credit to you. If you want to shop for a rate, do so within a discrete period of time, like 30 days, so that it does not appear that you are seeking massive amounts of credit from many creditors. It is fine to request your own credit report. That will not affect your score.

5. On "types of credit" you should apply for and open new credit card accounts only as needed. More accounts will not raise your score. If you have a new credit card, use it sparingly and pay it off quickly. Someone with no credit cards will have a lower score than someone who has paid off their credit cards responsibly.

Your credit score is critical to whether or not you can obtain a loan. Do not take it for granted. Pull your credit report, check it for errors, dispute the errors and monitor your credit report consistently. If your FICO score is low, try the tips we have suggested to raise the score and research this area by going to the FICO at www.fico.com for further information.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

After reading the article on Dr. Arati Patel in your Oct. 13 edition, I knew I had to respond.

It was a very good article, but something was missing.

That is the fact that she a very warm and caring person and treats you that way.

After my wife was diagnosed three years ago with Stage 4 metastatic breast cancer, I felt my life — and especially my wife's — was over.

We were blessed to be referred to Dr. Patel and she assured us everything would work out.

She was correct with her diagnosis and treatment, and today my wife is doing very well.

Dr. Patel will always have a special spot in our hearts.

We couldn't have done it without her.

Don Yeager
Hughesville, MD

To The Editor:

Of the local elections to be decided on November 8, I would argue the outcome of the St. Mary's County school board election between Dorothy Andrews and Marsha Williams is of utmost importance.

Both candidates promote their advocacy for parents, students, and teachers. However, Williams' responses to a teachers' union questionnaire reveals the underlying nature of her advocacy. For example, she opposes allocating public funding to home and privately schooled students. If the public schools are doing so well, why are they afraid of school choice? She supports mental health services in the schools. If the content of the National Association of School Psychologists website is representative of those services, children are in dire jeopardy of "woke" indoctrination. She supports teachers having "professional autonomy and the deference to teach the truth in their classrooms," seemingly without the oversight of parents. She supports "community" schools that will further undermine the rights and roles of parents.

Williams supports the formation of an Educational Equity Advisory Committee to promote the preferential treatment of students based on stereotyped group identities. Equity is a subterfuge that incorporates critical race theory into the administration of the public schools and "culturally relevant teaching" in the classrooms to indoctrinate children to be color conscious rather than color blind.

Williams appears to be an establishment-style, go-along-to-get-along, candidate to maintain the status quo for those people and groups that presently control the public schools. In contrast, Andrews has said the time has come to create a "new normal" in the public schools that serves parents and children above all others.

In the aftermath of the COVID closure of the public schools, and the failure of "virtual learning," the realization exists that school board elections do matter. I suggest the election of Dorothy Andrews.

2022 Calvert County Endorsements

The race for two at Large Board of Education seats could be the most important on this year's general election Calvert County ballots. The school board was made elected from being appointed out of recognition that parents and the general public should have a say in how their children are being educated and how taxpayer money is being expended. The current school board has lost sight of that.

The most glaring example has been their failure to remove the 10-speaker limit at their meetings. Originally a pandemic measure, it is now a pig-headed reluctance to listen to those who voted for them. Lisa Grenis and Jana Post are the only two candidates who have unequivocally promised to vote against the policy and should be elected to help right the ship at the Brooks Administration Building.

We endorse Buddy Hance to return as a voice of reason to the county commissioner board and Todd Ireland to join him as an At-Large Commissioner. In doing so we would like to congratulate Democratic candidate Chelsea Anne Montague for articulating some important needs such as affordable housing.

Mike Hart should also be returned for a third term as 1st District Commissioner. He has his finger on the pulse of the community.

And Catherine Grasso should be rewarded for her courageous challenge to Kelly McConkey's ethics violation. She will be a bright spot on the new board.

We endorse Ricky Cox for sheriff although we would like to remind him of the need to reach out to the public for input and guidance.

Bob Harvey has done a good job as state's attorney since being appointed three years ago and the voters should elect him for a full term.

District 27 State Senator Michael Jackson, although a Prince George's County resident, has shown he is equally interested in Calvert and has also shown he can collaborate well with his Republican colleagues Sen. Jack Bailey and Delegate Mark Fisher.

For Delegate, District 29C which represents the southern portion of Calvert County, we strongly endorse Todd Morgan.

As a successful businessman, 12 years as a very good County Commissioner, and the clear understanding of how Annapolis works, Todd Morgan along with Mark Fisher will be a strong and reliable voice for Calvert County.

outreach to homeowner's associations and schools. I have personally visited every high school to speak with criminal justice students. I have created a "shadowing" program that allows students to attend court with my prosecutors. Finally, I am an active participant in the Day of Law Program which brings home-schooled students to the Courthouse to learn about criminal justice.

Rick Piereck

I plan upon continuing to meet and communicate with community organizers regularly and updating the community about the status of cases. I will periodically meet with homeowner's associations and neighborhood watch programs to determine their needs. Finally, I would like for the State Attorney's Office to have an expanded role in the county's Citizens Academy, or work with the Calvert County Sheriff's Office to develop a Citizens Police Academy with participation of the State's Attorney's office. I would also like to see ongoing involvement at community events so citizens can have more access and trust in the State's Attorney's Office.

Do you propose any types of special courts (youth, veteran's, etc.) if elected?

Bob Harvey

I will expand services available to veterans through our mental health and drug court dockets. Our judges have stated that we do not have the numbers to support a separate Veteran's Court. Sowe are moving forward with a more nuanced approach, one that's supported by the Veteran's Affairs Commission. The Chief Judge of Maryland's District Court has agreed to help identify veterans entering into the criminal justice system. Once we identify eligible veterans, we will connect them to mentors who can guide them to resources. I'm not prepared to wait for grant funding; this is something we can do now.

Rick Piereck

I will work to establish a Veterans Treatment Court (VTC). VTC is different from other programs we currently have in Calvert County in three major ways. First, the VTC offers a structured environment to help support veterans. Second, the VTC has a mentoring component to help veterans adjust to civilian life and hold them accountable. Finally, the VTC includes the involvement of the US Department of Veterans Affairs ("VA") that helps cut through red-tape and link veterans to services within the VA. There are over six hundred VTCs throughout the USA, and they have proven to significantly reduce recidivism

Maryland Senate District 27

What skills, talent or experience do you bring to the bring to the table that will help you be an effective state senator?

Michael Jackson

As a young man, I joined the Marine Corps and that time helped to inspire my dedication to service. I have been fortunate to have a career in the public safety field and to ascend to the rank of Sheriff of Prince George's County. I believe that experience, along with my experience as an elected member of the Maryland General Assembly, has uniquely equipped me to represent the interests of Southern Maryland in Annapolis.

Al Larsen

I have leadership experience as a former Naval Officer, manager for a large aerospace company, and board member for several community organizations. As a systems engineer, I am trained to evaluate cost vs. benefit vs. risk, to balance competing requirements, and to analyze proposed changes for unintended consequences.

What will be the most pressing issue for the 2023 legislative session?

Michael Jackson

The most pressing issues currently facing both Calvert County and Maryland as a whole are combatting rising inflation and lessening corresponding tax burdens on Maryland residents. As a legislature, the General Assembly must do everything within its power to mitigate rising costs for goods and services and to provide tax incentives that improve the quality of life and create jobs in our communities.

Al Larsen

Education. The public schools have neglected the core curriculum of reading, writing, math, and science and have embarked on a "woke" agenda of CRT and gender awareness. As a result, one-fourth of our students are testing below the BASIC level for reading, and they have been for the past 20 years. The Thornton Commission has dictated increased funding for 20 years with no results. Now we have the Blueprint for Maryland's Future which dictates even higher funding levels. We must return to the original purpose of our schools: to teach reading, writing, math, sciences, history, and civics.

What should be done with the state surplus?

Michael Jackson

It's unusual for the state to carry a budget surplus but, largely thanks to COVID recovery funding from the federal government, we find ourselves in that place. We have to do everything within our power to return as much of the budget surplus to taxpayers as possible while also ensuring that we provide the necessary recovery funds to both workers and employers who have been negatively impacted by the COVID pandemic.

Al Larsen

The estimated surplus of $7.5 billion is 12.3 percent of the $61 billion FY23 budget. Since this money came from taxpayers, a significant portion should go back to taxpayers. A three-month gas tax holiday is estimated to cost $300 million. We could easily afford to take a six-month gas tax holiday. In addition, we should refund $500 to $1000 to each individual taxpayer. Assuming we have 4.2 million individual taxpayers, a $1000 refund to each taxpayer would return about $4.2 billion, leaving $2.7 billion for infrastructure and the Rainy Day fund.

Is there anything that the Maryland General Assembly can do to address inflation and/or insure the state continues on a path of economic growth?

Michael Jackson

Al Larsen

Michael Jackson

While inflation is typically a result of national circumstances, it is vital that the state plays a part in the recovery from the related economic downturn. We have to look at a variety of options including, but not limited to, tax incentives and stimulus plans that will put more money back in the pockets of everyday Marylanders, state retirees, veterans, and job creators.

Al Larsen

We need to incentivize the growth of businesses that manufacture or produce a product. A "product" can be either a physical item or intellectual property, so long as the product has more intrinsic value than the cost to produce it. That is how "wealth" is created and is the core of any viable economic engine. A reduction on the business tax is one such incentive that will benefit not only the core manufacturing business, but the supporting businesses such as retail and service industries.

CALVERT COUNTY GENERAL ELECTION

VOTERS GUIDE

Calvert County Sheriff:

What skills, talent or experience do you bring to the table that will help you be an effective sheriff?

Vaughn "Jay" Johnson

I bring 23 years of experience working with the Calvert County Sheriff's Office. Over the course of my career, I have worked in Patrol, Criminal Investigations/Narcotics and my current assignment as a School Resource Officer. The attribute I possess that will make me an effective Sheriff is my ability to communicate with people. This is something that has served me well working in our public school system for the past 14 years. I believe my ability to communicate effectively on all levels will be a tremendous asset as I strive to improve community relations and lead the Sheriff's Office.

Editor's Note: Candidate Ricky Cox did not respond to email and phone requests with answers to the questions.

What administrative and/or operational changes would you make if elected sheriff?

Vaughn "Jay" Johnson

The first thing I want to do if elected Sheriff is evaluate the organizational structure of the agency. I want to be sure we are utilizing our personnel and resources in the most effective manner. If there are areas I identify where implementing change will best serve the agency and the citizens of Calvert County, those changes will be made. I also plan to eliminate the current point based scoring component being used by our Patrol Bureau to evaluate their monthly performance.

What type of community outreach do you plan?

Vaughn "Jay" Johnson

If elected, shifting the focus of our agency mission to include more community policing initiatives is my top priority. Establishing a strong relationship with the community will play a vital role in the direction I want to take our agency. I will ensure that deputies are more visible in the neighborhoods throughout the county, while maintaining effective lines of communication. I will encourage our deputies to become mentors and coaches, so we can strengthen our bonds with the youth of our community. I will also hold town hall meetings to foster our community outreach initiatives.

Were mistakes made by the sheriff's office in the handling of the Leah Clark death investigation, and if so what would you change to ensure they don't happen again?

Vaughn "Jay" Johnson

Although I was not involved in the investigation, I would have handled things differently had I been Sheriff at the time of the incident. Based on the circumstances, I would have made arrangements to have the entire investigation turned over to an outside agency right away. A life was lost that day and it was our duty to ensure the investigation was unbiased and beyond reproach. I believe we let the Clark family down and that is unacceptable. If elected, I will implement policy changes to ensure similar situations are handled differently moving forward.

Vaughn Johnson

Calvert County State's Attorney

What skills, talent or experience do you bring to the table that will help you be an effective state's attorney?

Bob Harvey

I'm a prosecutor, not a politician. I make decisions based upon the law and the facts, not personal preference. I tell the truth. I have 40 years of criminal trial experience to anchor me. I've earned the reputation as a tough, effective, crime-fighter. I'm an excellent manager of people. I treat others with dignity and respect. I have solid relationships with judges, law enforcement, and community partners. I know how to get things done. I've assembled a staff of first-rate legal talent. Together, we have done a good job of keeping Calvert a safe place to live and work.

Rick Piereck

As a trial attorney, I have managed thousands of cases. I have supervised staff in both a military and civilian capacity, including supervising other attorneys. My military and extensive leadership background will help me structure training programs and effectively manage the State Attorney's staff improving proficiency and morale. I hold a degree in Public Administration which will help me to effectively administer the office. I am an effective communicator and work well with others, which will strengthen relationships with our partner agencies. I have the stamina and vigor to assume the role of a proactive State's Attorney.

Is the office staffed to the appropriate level to provide the necessary service for the citizens of Calvert County?

Bob Harvey

During my term in office, I have gained the trust of the County Commissioners. This has enabled me to increase staffing to meet the demand for services. In 2021, we added 1 attorney and a digital evidence coordinator to process police body-cam videos. In 2022, despite a County-wide "soft" hiring freeze, we added an attorney and a victim advocate to our Domestic Violence Unit, nearly doubling its size. For 2023, I am requesting another attorney and a paralegal to bolster restitution collection and provide liaison to the Police Accountability Board. The Commissioners have been very supportive of our efforts.

Rick Piereck

Rick Piereck

Bob Harvey

The office appears to be appropriately staffed. With the evolution of technology, I would like to see an in-house information technology and/or demonstrative evidence support person to assist in investigations and trial presentation.

What type of citizen outreach do you plan?

Bob Harvey

I announced on October 6 that I will be sponsoring Calvert County Crime Summit and invite community leaders and the public to come tell me what we can do to improve criminal justice. I have greatly expanded

The County Times is endorsing the full slate of Republican candidates this General Election in both state and local contests.

Dan Cox, a GOP delegate, is seeking the governorship. While controversial, he has spoken of his commitment to ensuring the freedom of Maryland citizens and that means a lot after two years of pandemic restrictions that badly hobbled businesses and was detrimental to the learning of our young people.

Michael Peroutka, seeking the Attorney General's office, also wants to bring more emphasis on the Constitutional rights of the people; he has likewise been critical of pandemic restrictions as unlawful.

Barry Glassman is a more moderate Republican and should serve well as Comptroller; he is also highly experienced as a former state senator for the 35th District and as the current County Executive of Harford County.

Both Chris Chaffee and Chris Palombi, running for U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives respectfully, deserve St. Mary's vote as they are also committed to consistent conservative values and policies.

Matt Morgan, running unopposed in District 29A, has been a dogged and determined legislator for St. Mary's. He deserves to return.

Deb Rey is vying with Democrat Del. Brian Crosby in District 29B in an attempt to return to that seat. Crosby has proved effective but Rey more closely represents the conservative sentiments of many St. Mary's County residents.

In the District 29C race County Commissioner Todd Morgan is the obvious choice. His experience as a leader in St. Mary's, his vast knowledge of the local defense contractor industry, and his willingness and ability to work across the aisle means he would be a strong representative for the Mother County as well as Calvert, into which the district spreads.

Likewise, Senator Jack Bailey, who is running unopposed, deserves another term as a staunch advocate for both St. Mary's and Calvert counties. He also works well with certain Democrats and is a strong advocate for property rights, sportsmen and sportswomen as well as the 2nd Amendment.

Commissioner President James "Randy" Guy should return to the dais in Leonardtown as should Mike Hewitt and Eric Colvin as incumbents; we hope that they will look to the immediate future and find ways to reduce the tax burden on citizens significantly and reduce county expenditures.

Voters should continue to vote to seat new-comer Mike Alderson to the District 3 seat. He has much to learn but is eager and his commitment to St. Mary's appears strong.

Scott Ostrow should get the nod for the District 4 commissioner seat; he has huge shoes to fill in filling the seat of Todd Morgan — no one could really replace him — but he seems to have a firm grasp of finance and has said he wants to lower taxes and closely watch expenditures.

The County Times admonishes all candidates to look to making the county government a far more transparent place. This means more than having town halls and public forums. This means talking more about policy and issues at the county commissioner dais during the final moments of meetings than what weekend gatherings members attended.

This means when citizens or the media ask a question that that get a prompt and accurate answer without obfuscation or parsing of words about how the citizens' questions are fashioned.

If the county can't give an immediate answer, citizens deserve a correct and reasonable answer as to why.

This means county staff must know that they are doing the people's business and must not just say that they are not sure if they are allowed to give out certain information.

At the national level, this election is mainly about voters' dissatisfaction with their leaders' unwillingness to listen and be accountable; change starts at the local level.

It is a privilege to hold a county office or employment.

Halloween Activities Abound This Weekend

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Halloween begins officially Oct. 31 but groups and communities around St. Mary's are busy preparing to get to trick or treating early.

William "BJ" Hall, president of the local NAACP chapter is helping to organize the third annual Halloween in the Square event set for this Saturday; the event started as a way to give children the fun of Halloween at a time when they were being isolated away from the pandemic.

"We started doing this when COVID-19 hit to give kids a safe place for trick or treating," Hall told The County Times. "We were still social distancing."

The vendors, which included local businesses who gathered in the parking lot of St. Mary's Square, used plastic tubing as chutes to transfer candy to children.

"They liked trying to catch the candy," Hall said. "It turned out to be a big attraction."

The impromptu delivery system was so popular they used it during the second year of the event, Hall said.

Hall said the event brought in between 300 and 400 children its first year and more than 500 last year.

"This year we're expecting a larger crowd," Hall said. "If we get over 1,000 kids that would be great.

"I hope everybody [vendors] runs out of candy."

In addition to free candy, this event features free haircuts for children, free face painting and special appearances from C3Wrestling, Foundation 4 Heroes, The Newtowne Players, Knowledge Boxing Center, a live DJ, fire apparatus from the Bay District Volunteer Fire Department as well as the St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office, Hall said.

The event runs from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Other Halloween events around St. Mary's include the Fright Line at Patuxent River Naval Air Museum in Lexington Park, which begins at 1:30. All children in costume under the age of 12 are admitted free, and all accompanying adults pay a reduced entrance price of only $7. Kids can participate in various arts and crafts activities around the museum at this time, and they can also trick-or-treat at each of the variously themed trunks along the flight line.

Leonardtown is also having Scarecrow Stroll event ending Oct. 30 where visitors can vote for their favorite scarecrow and Lexington Park Baptist Church is also holding a "trunk or treat" event where children can come and get candy from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Oct. 29.

New Internet Service Provider Coming to St. Mary's

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

A Chestertown-based internet service provider wants to come to St. Mary's County and provide broadband access through new fiber and the Commissioners of St. Mary's County unanimously approved a memorandum of understanding this week to make the new partnership happens.

It represents the first significant step in years in getting a competing brand of internet service provider here.

Think Big Networks currently works with Charles, Queen Anne and Kent counties in providing alternative broadband internet service, said local director of the Department of Information Technology Bob Kelly, who worked to bring the agreement to commissioners at their Oct. 25 business meeting.

"They're very interested in coming to St. Mary's County," Kelly told commissioners. "They are a bring-fiber-to-the-premises internet service provider."

"We're actually leveraging off of the work they're doing in Charles County."

There is no exact timeline yet as to when Think Big would come to St. Mary's and begin providing service.

"This is the first step in the process," Kelly said. "It doesn't mean construction would begin this afternoon."

The willingness of the provider to enter into an early agreement with the county, Kelly said, proved their intent.

"It shows very, very good faith on the part of the company," Kelly said.

For years both citizens and commissioners have complained publicly about the level of service provided by Breezeline — formerly known as Atlantic Broadband — including outages, slow connection speeds and increasing high costs.

The county currently has a cable franchise agreement with Breezeline to provide broadband internet service and has also partnered with the vendor to use millions in American Rescue Act funding to expand fiber down long drive-ways to homes that must have it to get internet connectivity.

The franchise agreement in no way prohibits competition or grants a monopoly to Breezeline but citizens have continued to complain that there being only one major service provider in the county means conditions are approaching those of a monopoly.

"It's massive to get another internet service provider here that's going to break up the... belief of a monopoly," said Commissioner John O'Connor.

Kelly said the new deal showed promise. "I don't think there's been a commissioner who hasn't been frustrated with some aspect of internet service," Kelly said. "It's one of the most promising solutions or alternatives to come along."

Commissioner Eric Colvin, who was involved in cementing the agreement between the county and Big Think, said citizens had often had to deal with less-than-optimal internet speeds.

Colvin said the Federal Communication Commission defined broadband service at 25 megabytes per second for download and three megabytes per second for uploading.

"A lot of people don't even achieve that speed with their current connections," Colvin said.

Kelly said he did not have information on the speed at which Think Big's fiber could deliver service.

Colvin was still enthusiastic about the services Big Think could bring.

"They're hungry," Colvin said of his assessment of Think Big. "They're trying hard, they're pushing hard."

"It's increasing competition, it's providing faster service; they're providing better service."

The new MOU requires that Think Big charge at prices equal to or better than current providers operating here, county documents show, and also provide a physical business office in the county.

The MOU also states that homes within 300 feet of the main fiber line will have connecting fiber at "no charge other than applicable installation fees for the individual subscriber's drop" according to the MOU text.

"For any dwelling unit in excess of three hundred feet drop distance, Think Big will extend service and the subscriber shall pay ThinkBig's actual cost of installation from its distribution line within the network from which a usable signal can be obtained with such cost being only the incremental cost beyond three hundred feet distance for any installation," the MOU continues.

Think Big has also agreed to provide fiber connectivity for several county facilities at no charge as well, according to the agreement.

These are: Evergreen, Capt. Walter Francis Duke, Lettie Marshall Dent and White Marsh elementary schools as well as Chesapeake Charter School and St. Mary's Virtual Academy.

Other facilities to be served include: Wicomico Golf Course; Charlotte Hall Park & Ride; Myrtle Point Park; Colton Point Museum; Snow Hill Park; Hickory Hills WPS; Hickory Hills WWPS; Hollywood Water Tower; Office Building Camden Way - Engineering; Piney Point WPS & WWPS Station; Wicomico Shores Wastewater Treatment Plant and Wicomico Shores WPS.

Kelly said in a later interview that the geographical area of St. Mary's Think Big would service was yet to be determined.

Kelly said, however, that there was nothing in the agreement to restrict it.

"They're still figuring out the design of getting here," Kelly said.

Calls to Think Big for comment on this article were not returned as of press time.

St. Mary's CDC Awarded $250,000 For St. Mary's Square Revitalization Project

On Friday October 21st, Governor Larry Hogan announced the State of Maryland awarded St. Mary's Community Development Corporation (CDC) $250,000 to fund its St. Mary's Square Revitalization Project. The grant—provided through the Maryland Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD)—is part of the Community Legacy program, one of six State Revitalization grant programs.

The DHCD Community Legacy program provides community development organizations and local governments with funding for projects aimed at strengthening communities through activities such as commercial revitalization and business retention and attraction. Hogan announced Friday the Community Legacy program awarded $8 million to 64 projects in designated Sustainable Communities throughout Maryland.

In addition to resurfacing St. Mary's Square, the central marketplace of Lexington Park, the grant will also go towards the construction of a central plaza with a bus stop, bike racks, and planters to beautify the space and to encourage community events and gatherings. St. Mary's CDC will provide ongoing updates on the status of the project and expects construction to begin in fall 2023.

Last Member of St. Mary's Academy Class of 1942 Honored

"Tiny" Taylor and Fr. Scott Woods

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Loretta "Tiny" Abell-Taylor, 97, visited St. Mary's Ryken High School last week and said she was impressed with the young people attending class there.

She can offer an opinion as she is the last surviving graduate of St. Mary's Academy — once its own school and now one half of the current school nestled on Camp Calvert Road — Class of 1942.

The school honored her at her 80th class reunion Oct. 20 by dedicating a tree in her name.

"I'm still thinking about it," Taylor told The County Times. "It was a month or two ago when they called me and told me what they wanted to do.

"I'm the only one of my class left; I feel like the oldest person in the world."

Taylor had three sisters, all of whom became nuns and have since passed away, she said.

"I'm the last of 10 children," she said.

But she still has fond memories of her school days at St. Mary's Academy.

"I enjoyed St. Mary's Academy because of our teachers, they were all nuns," Taylor said. "I was active in school.

"The camaraderie I had with my classmates was excellent."

St. Mary's Academy was an all-girls school until it merged with Ryken High School decades ago.

"We got an excellent education," Taylor said of her studies there. "It was an asset to St. Mary's County, St. Mary's Academy was."

The dedication of the tree included a mass and blessing performed by Fr. Scott Woods.

"We are truly blessed to have the Taylor Family and 'Tiny T' as part of the St. Mary's Ryken legacy," said SMR President, Dr. Rick Wood. "Tiny is such a special person and we treasure being in her presence and hearing all of her stories about her time at [St. Mary's Academy].

"The oak tree on our campus will serve as a symbol of her strength and loyalty to our school community."

The tree dedicated in her honor had a plaque placed on it that reads: "The oak tree branches reach high into the heavens. Its roots dig deep into the earth, woven together, connecting heaven and earth."

Taylor said she was enamored with the inscription.

"We've always been dedicated to St. Mary's Academy, now St. Mary's Ryken," she said. "It was really an honor for them to name a tree after me."

She said she hoped the students at St. Mary's Ryken would treasure their time there just as she had.

"They'll be given something they'll never forget," she said. "It's the religion, the discipline and the social life they'll have there."

Tests Show Water Contamination at LMS, Tech Center

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

An unacceptable level of coliform bacteria was found late last week after water samples were taken from both Leonardtown Middle School and the James A. Forrest Career and Technology Center, which are co-located on Point Lookout Road.

Hand washing stations as well as bottled water were made available for students and staff until contaminants could be brought back down to acceptable levels.

Superintendent Dr. J. Scott Smith told The County Times that normal water service would take several days to reestablish.

"We probably won't have regular water service until Thursday," Smith said.

The water at both facilities comes from a well and has yet to test positive for e-coli bacteria, according to Smith.

"But even with a negative test we can't say that it wouldn't appear," Smith said.

A letter to parents of students at the facilities was released Oct. 24.

"The presence of total coliform mandates that certain precautions be taken to ensure the safety of the individuals who use the affected water supply," the missive reads.

The samples were taken on Oct. 20 and the results returned the following day.

"On Monday... [the] Department of Maintenance delivered bottled water and hand sanitizer to both sites and signage was posted to alert staff and students," the letter reads. "Remediation includes chlorination of the entire water supply system at both sites.

"As chlorine is an irritant, alternative water supplies have been provided for drinking and handwashing."

Smith said finding contaminants of this nature were not "an uncommon occurrence" for water drawn from a well.

The water would have to be tested at least three more times, he said, both to ensure the contaminants had been eradicated and chlorine brought down to acceptable levels.

What about God? What does God have to do with this Planet of the Dogs? What was God thinking and doing?

Observe and contemplate the Earth ruled by dogs. The world of the dog is indeed a wild and wondrous place where those carry humans get a well deserved comeuppance for despoiling Mother Earth, their cruelty to animals including themselves, and their disobedience to God. How then on God's once green Earth can there be a "harmonious outcome" for any Earthly living creature? Seek and ye shall find, within BoonDoggie.

An Excerpt from Chapter 3 of the many whimsical as well as harsh explanations for the demise of humans –
"In the Dog male mind, females exist solely for sex, pups, and kennel keeping—just like human society—before Huwomen banned testosterone as a dangerous substance and rid themselves of men."¹

¹ Dogs couldn't determine if the human female affliction "PMS," that also was a pox on men, oft used to excuse human female irascible conduct, stood for Pre-menstrual Syndrome or Post-menstrual Syndrome. After extensive scientific research on human female irritable behaviors—Dogs termed "Grumpology"—Dogs concluded PMS could have stood for either. There also was the human female malady "Menopause" that caused "Hot Flashes" among older women where women physically ran hot one moment and then cold the next. Women also turned hot one moment in erotic desire, and then cold the next in erratic temperament. With no Herd Immunity from this Mandemic, men were desperate to find cures for these petulant and snappish human female behavioral disorders. However, the only known protection for men from the ravages of these female ailments was that of social-distancing, self-quarantine, and abstinence from women; consequently, men continued to "waist" away until they were but pitiful skeletons of manhood."

Alleged Driver In Shooting Charged With Attempted Murder

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

A North Beach resident who police say they believe was behind the wheel of a vehicle recently used in a drive-by shooting in Lexington Park is facing first-and-second-degree attempted murder charges.

Justin Tyler Chapman, 19, remains incarcerated in the St. Mary's County Adult Detention Center in Leonardtown.

The shooting Chapman is alleged to have taken part in occurred Oct. 7, court papers stated, on Suburban Drive off of Great Mills Road when masked assailants reportedly drove past a residence where Javeon Demetrius Washington, Jeshuan Marcel Proctor and Demetrius Deandre Young, were seated on the front porch and were fired upon.

The victims told responding Maryland State Troopers that the suspect vehicle was white and had distinctive damage to its front.

The owner of the residence told police there were three bullet holes in her home; troopers found several spent shell casings and catalogued them into evidence.

One of the passengers in the suspect vehicle, though, Washington told police, had their mask pulled up revealing their identity as Amir Rashad Rich.

Washington told troopers that he and Rich — who has not been charged in connection with the shooting — had been "beefing" over social media for the past two years and that Rich had threatened Washington with violence.

According to Washington, Rich had tried to start a fight with him on the school bus as early as two days before the shooting, but Washington declined, according to police reports.

When Washington wouldn't provide his location through social media, according to police reports, Rich was able to find him anyway and told Washington he would come by and "spin up."

Rich contacted Washington after the shooting, police reports stated, and said he could have shot all three of the victims but only shot the house instead.

Police also said they captured a recording of Rich making a threat to shoot at the home of another of the victims on Forest Run Drive, court papers show.

Chapman was later identified as the owner, and according to a relative, sole driver of the 2016 Honda Civic alleged to have been used in the shooting.

A search warrant of the vehicle turned up Chapman's wallet, police stated, and two 9mm spent cartridge casings.

Increase in Fire Service Assists Signals Larger Change

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

A seemingly small change in the way fire departments are being asked to assist rescue squads is signaling a larger sea change in the nature of emergency medical services are provided in St. Mary's, said the county's chief emergency response official.

"We're transitioning to a career EMS system," said Steve Walker, director of the Department of Emergency Services. "They [volunteer rescue squad members] will never go away."

"Once they were the primary providers but that's not the way it is anymore; the majority of medical calls are being taken by paid personnel."

At the latest meeting of the county's Emergency Services Board — Oct. 12 — the members spoke briefly about the increase in calls from rescue squads to fire departments to assist emergency medical technicians on emergency calls.

Walker explained in a later interview that rescue squads, which now all employ paid personnel during daytime hours, may only send a few personnel for a sick call but may not be able to effectively physically transport the patient out of their home into the ambulance as one example.

This is one of the reasons why fire department personnel were being called out more frequently to rescue calls, Walker said.

Just three years ago, before COVID-19, Walker said, it was easier for volunteers to muster the numbers on calls to avoid having to call for fire service assistance.

Walker was adamant that this change was not the "twilight" of the volunteer rescue squad service in St. Mary's, but the old days were likely never to make a return.

BLS RESPONSE

Volunteers 31%

County Staff 69%

The career EMS employees, some of whom had been local volunteers who were able to get paid for their work now, still needed the volunteer squad infrastructure, Walker said.

"We can't go out and buy 14 ambulances, so we use theirs," Walker said. "We need their squad buildings, our paid people can bunk there."

"Right now, it's an absolutely strong partnership; it's not the twilight of the volunteer EMS service."

Since the county instituted a paid ambulance and EMS service emergency medical calls have increased more than 60 percent and some of the latest statistics from the county show that almost 70 percent of calls are now handled by career personnel.

The remaining 30 percent are handled by volunteers. For the Advanced Life Support Unit (ALS) the numbers are even more stark.

More than 80 percent of medical calls for the ALS unit are now being handled by career personnel; just 18 percent are being handled by volunteers, county data shows.
