Budget Includes $13.4 More for Schools

State's Attorney Gets Extra Assistant

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

With no discussion the Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) on May 23 decided what to do with the historic request from the school board to increase the school system's local funding by $22.4 million more than the current year.

They will fund $13.4 million now. At the budget hearing the week before, Commissioner President Buddy Hance said he had secured an agreement with School Superintendent Dr. Andrae Townsel to provide that amount now and review the fiscal situation at the end of this year (at the fiscal year midpoint) to see if the rest can be funded.

Hance said the amount funded can allow the school board to give staff a three percent cost of living adjustment (COLA) instead of Townsel's proposal to give a total of a 6.5 percent COLA required to fund the state's Blueprint for education reform.

Townsel reported at the county budget hearing the following priorities for the Blueprint:

- A 10 percent increase for teachers between FY19 and FY24 (final 1 percent plus 5.5 percent is included in proposed budget)
- Implementation of a career ladder by FY25
- Starting teacher salary of $60,000 by FY27 (FY 23 starting teacher salary is $51,005 for bachelor's degree)
- And other Blueprint requirements.

The Blueprint also has a pre-kindergarten component.

The school board will approve its final budget next month that will decide how the county funding will be allocated.

Unspoken in and unanswered out of the May 23 decision is how it will be paid for. At the budget hearing it was said the county is still trying to determine the property tax revenue that will be received from the Cove Point LNGF and Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power plants. That would be one option. It has consistently been said that fund balance will not be used for recurring expenses, which the school funding will be.

State's Attorney Bob Harvey

The County Times made an inquiry to the county about the revenue sources but did not receive a response as of press deadline.

In addition to the education funding, the BOCC agreed to give the state's attorney an additional assistant state's attorney for $165,224.

State's Attorney Robert Harvey said, "I've been doing this job now for a little over three years. Prior commissioners have been very supportive of public safety and law enforcement. This board is equally supportive. So, I want to thank you. This position is a result of a case that was brought to my attention by Commissioner Cox, where maybe we didn't do everything we could have done to get restitution in a case. This position is designed to designate a state's attorney to aggressively monitor restitution and criminal cases and seek prosecution for violations of probation when it's not paid. So that's what this job is all about. It's also going to do some liaison with the police accountability board."

The public hearing keeps the record open until close of business June 5th. The FY 24 budget is scheduled to be adopted on June 6th by the BOCC.

Presumably the questions about sources of revenue for the added expenses will be answered at that time.

Audit Reveals Youth Team's Financial Errors

Adult Members Criticize Chesapeake Beach Response

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

In spite of assurances of progress, the fissure between the Town of Chesapeake Beach and the youth sports team that uses a town park appeared to grow wider during the course of the May 18 town meeting.

Since the town took ownership of Kellan's Field from the county, they have also taken over the agreement with the Beach Buccaneers organization over the use of the field. An audit initiated by the town uncovered financial irregularities although there have been no allegations of illegal activity. The issue has led to the resignation of the organization's president, but the town says there are still some unresolved financial issues.

At the start of the May 18 meeting, Mayor Pat Mahoney said, "I have faith that this is a positive turning point for all and look forward to a positive partnership of transparency and benefit to the families of the town of Chesapeake Beach and Calvert County. By achieving this, the town will continue to support the Beach Bucs with annual grants and continue to spend the annual $175,000 that is our cost to support the current youth sports program at Kellam's Field. We look forward to investing approximately $445,000 in capital improvements at Kellam's Field over the next year so it will continue to be the best football field in Southern Maryland that the boys and girls who wear orange and black deserve."

But as speaker after speaker came to the microphone or shouted from the audience, it became apparent that there was a lot of unrest within the Beach Buccaneer community about how they have been treated by the town. There was considerable disenchantment over a presentation by Town Administrator Holly Wahl detailing the history of the dispute where the organization members thought it constituted piling on. There was however no stated dispute over the facts presented by Wahl.

She explained, "Per the youth sports agreement, the town is able to review all financial records of the team. And so, the town had requested this information as part of the youth sports agreement and was not provided with financial information that was not altered. That prompted the town to conduct the third-party audit, which was paid for at the town's expense, in accordance with the agreement. There was also the requirement to be a nonprofit, and the team's nonprofit status had lapsed and was no longer active. In addition, the team had not filed their tax returns for multiple years."

Wahl added, "in February of 2023, a town resident volunteer did step up and helped the team and provided multiple items of support. So, we did receive additional support, and we were left with about $21,478 which remained unsupported or with insufficient documentation."

Wahl reported, "The current status is that the town continues to work with Beach Buccaneers to ensure financial transparency in ways that make sense and limits administrative burden."

"There's been no interruption to children's activities and the town has used all measures necessary to keep the children on the field while we make these adjustments to ensure financial processes are accounted for," she concluded.

New Beach Buccaneers President Jason Cabbage was visibly upset at what had transpired up to that point as he spoke. "Originally, we had a joint statement prepared, but I wholeheartedly cannot read that. We're here in the 11th hour and we're hurt by the actions of the town to shame our organization."

He added, "Petty back and forth does nothing for the community or the kids because it's a waste of time and resources for all. Our kids deserve the absolute best, and we can't give that to them if we're constantly beat down. We have stated numerous times, and in many forums, public and private, that we've failed. Our books were a mess. And we are working our hardest to fix our errors. The answer cannot just be to follow the youth sports agreement. While we signed the 2023 version, it was only done because without doing so, our kids will not have a field for spring sports. The 2023 Youth Sports Agreement had significant modifications from the 2022 version. These modifications were deliberate and include requirements such as permanent access to all our banking accounts, Quick Books, in order to monitor all our transactions in real time. Mayor and the council members, we want to move forward. We need you to step up as part of your civic duty and get involved."

Bucs parent Jamie Schulz said, "I get it that a bunch of volunteers messed up on books. I get it. They're not CPAs. They don't have a CPA doing all their stuff. I get it." But he said he was embarrassed by the town's reaction.

Speaker after speaker criticized the town. Several council members said they were caught by surprise.

Councilman Charles Fink said, "I'm not really sure how to follow that. I'm a bit blindsided by the rancor. I need to learn more, apparently, because I thought we were further along than we are."

Councilwoman Elizabeth Hartman said, "I really did think it was a small accounting problem that was just going to be sorted (out) and taxes would be filed, and things would be done. And that was it. And I was also very surprised at everything that came out tonight as far as your feelings of being betrayed by the town, being lied to by the town. And I am very distressed that it has come to this. And I hope, and I think we can make the trust continue or at least rebuild it with you."

National Guard Armory to be Demolished

Will Make Way for Open-Air Pavilion

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The Calvert County Planning Commission has approved a permit to demolish the old National Guard Armory in Prince Frederick. It was built in 1953, and most recently served as temporary quarters for the Prince Frederick Volunteer Fire Department while their new facility was being constructed.

The site for a while was slated to be the home of the new county administration building, but those plans were scrapped.

At the May 17 commission meeting, Jason Levitt, project engineer with the Department of Public Works, said, "This demolition permit really encompasses part of the site. It doesn't require demolishing all of the structures. We're looking to take down the armory itself, remove the sidewalk, remove the pump station facility, and install a new fence."

Capital Projects Analyst Veronica Atkinson told the Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) at their March 7 meeting that included in next year's proposed capital budget, "is the Armory Square Development project; this project was recently awarded 100 percent grant funding. This project will fall under the Department of Public Works Capital Division. The project was awarded $60,000 in FY 2023 and an additional amount of $2 million was awarded for Fiscal Year 2024, for the design and construction of a multi-use open-air pavilion."

According to Public Information Program Manager Sarah Ehman, "The pavilion will be located on the site of the armory building, which is currently owned by the county. We don't have a rendering available at this time; plans include a commercial kitchen, restrooms and a grassy area surrounding the pavilion to support a variety of events including a farmers' market, community events, arts and entertainment."

Leavitt said at the May 17 planning commission meeting about the problems with saving the historic structure, "The building completely needs to be rejuvenated. It doesn't have HVAC, it's going to need a new roof, it's going to need new flooring, interior updates, et cetera. There's remediation required for both asbestos and lead paint on the inside of the building. It does not meet current ADA criteria and the wall on north side is failing and likely will require complete replacement."

Leavitt said the grants do have a sunset provision, "so we basically are trying to get ahead of the curve a little bit on this by requesting this demolition."

Former commissioner Tim Hutchins had hoped to save the building for use as a veteran's service center. And a community theater group had expressed hope it could be converted for use as a theater and arts center.

Leavitt said some of the history will be saved. He noted, "There will be design inclusion of some of the existing building elements. Number one, there is an MNG (Maryland National Guard) concrete monument on the south facade of the building. It's a large concrete slab. So, in the demolition details we are going to attempt to save that so that it can be used in some capacity for something in the new design, whether it's a step or a monument type thing or something of that nature. There are to be six pallets of bricks saved from the building itself and they're going to be cleaned. So, we're going try to use them also in another design capacity."

The commission unanimously approved the demolition permit.

County Seeks Grant to Advance Emergency Homeless Shelter

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

The Calvert County Board of County Commissioners (BOCC) has approved applying for a state grant to complete engineering design work for renovation of a building in Prince Frederick for an emergency homeless shelter.

The building is at 85 Main Street. The county had earlier received an $800,000 grant from the state Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program to purchase the property.

Community Resources (CR) Special Projects Manager Jacquelyn Culver told the BOCC at a May 23 public hearing on the grant: "There is a documented need for an emergency weather shelter due to an inadequate amount of beds in local programs."

She said previous homeless surveys showed: 373 individuals served in 2018; 451 in 2019; and 440 in 2020. The most recent statistics are still being compiled.

She said, "These numbers include the growing number of senior homelessness. The county's current Project ECHO Shelter has exceeded available capacity and has limits on serving the chronic homeless with serious mental illness. Instead, these individuals often live in encampments and cars, presenting a health and public safety issue; this also frustrates small business owners."

Culver reported to the BOCC: "Local established nonprofits On Our Own of Calvert, Inc. and LifeStyles of Maryland, Inc., have proposed a partnership with the county on this project. Both nonprofits work with CR on homelessness outreach, case management and services."

The Phase 2 grant request to the Maryland Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD), which operates the CDBG program, is for $600,000, Culver said, adding, "Additional funding for day-to-day operations is available through other grant opportunities."

Several representatives of On Our Own of Calvert spoke in support of the grant as did one of their clients, a homeless man who has been helped by their program.

On Our Own of Calvert, Inc. has been providing services to Calvert County's homeless population for more than 27 years, Director of Community Resources Jennifer Moreland said last year during a presentation on the first phase of the project.

The BPCC unanimously approved applying for the additional monies.

Strew Fresh Flowers O'er Their Graves

A SONG BY L.L. ROSS, 1871

Today a nation's tears are shed over many a noble hero's grave;
 New honors pay our hallowed dead who died our country's flag to save.

Today a nation's gratitude is paid to noble heroes slain.

Their deeds immortal shall ever live - they fought and died, but not in vain.

Today the living heroes stand around their fallen comrade's grave

All honor to the heroic band who fought our nation's life to save!

We'll cherish long the memories dear
 of our departed heroes brave;

We'll bring fresh flowers year by year and strew them on each grave.

Sleep on brave hearts - the flag you bore through all the land now proudly waves;

Your comrades dear and friends each year will strew fresh flowers on your graves.

Memorial Day: It's Personal for Stars and Stripes Speaker

By Dick Myers
Staff Writer

This year's guest speaker at the annual Stars and Stripes ceremony in Chesapeake Beach has first-hand experience on the real meaning of Memorial Day.

Air Force Major Garrett Temple, PhD, during his 23 years in the military has served 10 overseas deployments, including five combat missions in Iraq and two in Afghanistan.

If you've seen the movie "The Lone Survivor," Temple said, "that's Operation Red Wings. That rescue, I was on that team that found Petty Officer Deets and Lieutenant Murphy. So, that's just one example of times where you show up on the scene and there's already Americans that are down."

The film and the book that influenced it tell of a four-man SEAL reconnaissance and surveillance team given the task of tracking down the Taliban leader Ahmad Shah.

"I think anytime you're faced with a fellow service member or somebody on your team, or another American who's been killed in combat," he said, "it puts several emotions, from anger, to grief and confusion. All that happens in a very brief moment. And for most of us, for everybody overseas, they don't have a lot of time to process all that stuff, because that happens and then typically within an hour or the next day, you're out on a different mission."

That was day two of a 10-day mission, he explained. "We continuously had to be out there after that. And it's not until later on that you get some time to decompress and think about it. I think oftentimes that's what people fail to understand, especially now when we travel back and forth so quickly from overseas to home. You know, you could be here in a day essentially, and it's fine at that time to decompress."

A friend of his was also killed in combat. "I wasn't there at the scene, but he was on his 14th deployment and was killed in Afghanistan."

He spoke personally about that at last year's Stars and Stripes event, about Memorial Day for all Americans. "And in an almost mystical way, we are all connected to it. We all have a relative, a family member. It could be somebody in our immediate family, a father, a son, a daughter, a mother, a close friend that has been lost in wartime, somebody down the street, a neighbor of yours. Across America, you hear these stories, somebody who's on your Facebook profile these days, like, in a way we're all connected to this, and it's all geared towards preserving our freedom. And it's sometimes difficult to deal with and to think about it. But I think what's unique about Memorial Day from other days is it's a solemn day, but it gives us an opportunity to put aside our differences as a country and come together if only for one day to think about that connection that we all share to it."

Of course, Memorial Day weekend is noted as much for outdoor cookouts as for remembering America's fallen heroes. And Temple doesn't begrudge Americans for that. "The friends that I have that have been killed in combat or have died in training, they loved a great barbecue. They loved hanging out with their friends and family in those settings. So, I think it's appropriate to celebrate them that way because that's what they would want to be doing themselves. But I also think the other part of it is gathering together as a community like we're doing at Stars and Stripes or like we're doing at the county courthouse on Monday for Memorial Day, where we're having another service there for the county that we get together and we take some moments to reflect seriously about what's going on, what has happened, where we're at as a country, and reflect upon those that have given all and the family and friends left behind."

And the day is as much about those who have been left behind. He said, "That's part of the reason why we do these things like Stars and Stripes. Last year we had two gold star families there. We're there to lift them up as well. They've paid so much and lost so much that we owe it to them to celebrate Memorial Day and to help remember their loved ones."

Temple is chairman of the county's Veterans Affairs Commission. He said, "On April 4th of this this year, we had a proclamation presented by the Board of County Commissioners for Gold Star Spouse's Day and also for the Month of the Military Child, which was April."

He said, "One thing we are advocating for and in the process of doing with the county is implementing property tax credits for certain gold star spouses in the county. The state has legislation that passed years ago, which allows property tax credits for surviving spouses who are not remarried. And we're in the process now of doing that work to bring it before the public for a hearing and then before the Board of County commissioners. Hopefully we can get that done by October."

The commission's motto is "Honor, Advocacy and Respect." He said, "These are the things that kind of drive us and give us an objective strategic vision to look forward to."

One of their new initiatives last October was Operation Green Light, "to bring veterans issues and veterans awareness to the community."

Major Temple is currently serving as a legislative liaison to the U.S. House of Representatives.

He has service in his blood. "My father served active duty during Vietnam. He was in the Air Force and then was in the Reserves my whole childhood, also in the Air Force. My family has served in the military all the way back into the revolution. My family came to this country in the 1600s and settled in the Massachusetts area. So, we've had people in every conflict from the revolution on in my family."

"We do have a strong service culture in my family. Patriotism is a virtue and it's something that's just very important."

Special Forces Veteran Reflects on Sacrifice

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Only about a year after graduating from high school in Texas, Tim Tullos was looking for a purpose in life.

He decided to join the U.S. Army.

Now in his mid-50s, Tullos, who lives in Avenue and is an assistant pastor at Patuxent Baptist Church, still has vivid memories of his service.

"I was just trying to do something that meant something," Tullos told The County Times. "When I joined, I had no idea what it would be like. I excelled because I was a worker."

He went through boot camp and advanced infantry training and began to rise through the ranks quickly.

He and everyone he went through basic training with were sent to Fort Ord in California as a cohort.

"We were straight leg infantry," Tullos said. "And then I learned there were other things I could do."

"Some of them were there just for the paycheck, some of them were just there to get an education; I wanted to be around people who wanted to work."

He went through air assault school and became an instructor in close quarter combat.

Still, he wanted more.

"I heard about the Rangers and tried out for them," said Tullos.

He spent two years in that elite unit often times either training or deployed as part of a special surveillance unit.

"I worked with guys who loved their jobs," Tullos said. "They were patriots. They loved God and their country."

As Memorial Day approaches, Tullos said it's a time to remember those who made the ultimate sacrifice for freedom, but he said that every member of the military makes sacrifices to ensure that others can live free.

"On Memorial Day you get to focus on people who gave their lives to serve a country where you get to enjoy what other countries don't enjoy," Tullos said. "I've given the better part of my back, I've given the better part of my knees in service to my country, but I don't regret it."

Among his fondest memories are a training exercise he was in where conditions were among the harshest that he'd ever been in, but the people he shared it with made it worthwhile.

"It was raining, it was miserable," Tullos said. "I hadn't slept in five days, I hadn't eaten in two days and the last clean water I had had was 12 hours ago."

"But I looked at the give guys with me and they were just content."

It spoke to the philosophy of soldiers who had chosen to be fighting men.

"You train like you fight," Tullos said. "We believed that."

Working in what was called a long-range surveillance company, Tullos had a special job in the Rangers long before cell phones or drones were used as they are now in combat.

He and his team had to remain hidden behind enemy lines to gain intelligence and wait until the right moment to report it.

"You had access to a satellite through communications every 30 hours," Tullos said. "There was that little window and that was it."

From the 75th Ranger Regiment he went to pass selection for the Special Forces, also known as the Green Berets where he spent another three years working with the best of the best.

"My brothers, the guys I was working with they were awesome," Tullos said.

Tullos went — as veterans often say — "down range" several times; he doesn't like to talk about it much.

But through hardship he never really wanted to leave the military, that is until he met his future wife — Carin — in San Antonio, Texas.

He was undergoing training to become a Special Force medic, also known as a team doc, and she was an officer in the U.S. Navy.

Their first year of marriage they were still serving apart in two different duty stations.

Tullos decided it was time to get out and start a new life with his wife and soon to be family, which grew to six children.

Tullos is now a grandfather.

"I just saw so many broken families [from the Special Forces]," Tullos said. "So I just went back to swinging a hammer."

Tim Tullos

Experienced in carpentry and homebuilding, Tullos now runs his own home improvement business.

He has taught his children to respect all veterans who gave their lives, or even a portion of it, in service to their country so they could remain free.

"I didn't make the ultimate sacrifice, but those veterans gave a portion of their life so I can enjoy the American dream," Tullos said. "I think that's a big deal."

SERVING THOSE WHO SERVED

Patriot Connect is a program designed to help veterans and active military personnel transition back into the community with ease. For returning vets, dealing with a termination notice from SMECO could be the last straw. So SMECO is reaching out to the men and women who have served our country.

Our goal is to help someone who is suffering from a stress disorder get one step closer to a normal life. By making it easier for people with PTSD, combat stress, or related trauma to accomplish everyday tasks, we hope to help customer-members—people who have risked their lives in service to our country—with reintegrating into the community.

MEMORIAL DAY

REMEMBER & HONOR

A View From The BLEACHERS

MOMENTS

By Ronald N. Guy Jr.
Contributing Writer

Foiled by a crashed ticket service (nameless, for now, to protect the guilty) last fall, and with time slipping away, the prospects seemed bleak. There was still a way through the gate, but the cost resembled a mortgage payment, not a few hours of entertainment. Two young hearts weren't broken, but with time running out and no viable options, they braced for disappointment.

Then light fought through the clouds.

"Dad, I just got a ticket notification...what do I do?" "Where?", I asked. "Philly...on Saturday night. The tickets are still a lot...oh, and we have four minutes to decide", said my daughter.

Let me offer a couple things. First, "a lot" was a LOT less than I had been tracking on the secondary market, so this flicker of hope had my attention. But it came out of nowhere. The four minutes to decide were trimmed to two-and-a-half once my slowing, middle-age brain processed this unexpected possibility and the adrenaline it stoked. Pressure. With no idea if this date worked for our family, no hotel, no clue if that other fragile heart I mentioned was available or could get from school in Boston to Philly, I gave my daughter the go-ahead. Details, details. Two dreams were on the line. "No" or "Let me think about it" weren't on the menu. "Yes" was the only option.

And that's how my daughter and niece, after months of struggle, researching, checking and crying (lots and lots of crying), survived Ticketmaster's debacle and scored seats to Taylor Swift's concert.

In the end, all those unknowns worked out just fine – the drive to Philadelphia, my niece's availability and train from Boston, the two hours of prep (two hours!) the ladies needed before the concert and finding our way through the maze of Swifties. On the drive home, one word dominated my thoughts: moments. All that struggle, all the worry, the time, the cost: none of it mattered now. Those two young ladies (besties) had a moment together, one that created a precious, lifetime memory. Priceless stuff.

With the sale of the Washington Commanders moving closer to completion, long-suffering fans of the Burgundy and Gold are starting to view the future through a decidedly different lens. At the very least, prospective owner Josh Harris seems capable of building a professional organization that fans can be proud to root for again. And what if the team wins? Regularly. Can you imagine? Maybe, maybe not (you to be at least 40-years-old to remember when this franchise had sustained success). I can...and it was glorious. At its peak, the team cut through every petty difference even a town like Washington, D.C. and its surrounding region could muster – a razor sharp knife through buttery political sludge.

From 1981 into the early 1990s, D.C. had a football moment. The scramble for tickets, the pre-game prep, the euphoria of the event, the absolute and unqualified togetherness of those wearing the colors – it was very similar to a Taylor Swift concert. Wins put a spring in your step all week. Losses hurt until at least Wednesday. And then, as Swift says in her song "August", it all "...slipped away into a moment in time."

It can happen again. The Caps hoisted the Stanley Cup in 2018. The Nats had their World Series moment in 2019. Sometimes moments are more like "Eras" (see what I did there, Swifties?). The Pittsburgh Steelers of the 1970s. Duke basketball. The Packers of the 1960s, then with Brett Favre and Aaron Rodgers. Serena Williams and Roger Federer. Michael Jordan's Chicago Bulls. Alabama football – with Paul "Bear" Bryant and now with Nick Saban. The Tom Brady-Bill Belichick Patriots.

Dan Snyder broke us: we concluded (correctly) that nothing good would come from his ownership. Josh Harris and his ownership team haven't made a single football move yet. They haven't even officially assumed the helm of the Commanders. But maybe the phoenix (Harris) will rise from the ashes (Snyder) – that's the prevailing feeling now. Harris has allowed us to dream again. And if that Taylor Swift experience proved anything, it was that a dream, held onto tightly, can produce an unforgettable moment.

The Tackle Box Fishing Report

By Ken Lamb
Contributing Writer

The calendar says summer is here, but the weather is refusing to give up its grip on cold. Bay water temperature remains at about 67 degrees and the daytime temps this week will not bring us up to the norm of 72. So, the fish are acting a little funny.

Stripers are active in the mouth of the Potomac for trollers and lure casters in the Cornfield Harbor area on the warmer afternoons. The average size is about 23 inches and the two per day, 20-inch minimum creel limit is attainable. The universal 31 inch maximum is in effect, so be careful to keep your keepers in the slot. Puppy drum and speckled trout have been caught there too, but just one here and there. Further up the Potomac there were mixed reports this week as tides have been low with little movement. Some perch were caught by bottom fishermen and rockfish trollers could not find consistent catches. The new moon is now waxing and full moon is June 3, bringing strong tides and better fishing.

Savvy fishermen have found good rockfish in the Salt Islands from the Mouth of the Choptank to Hooper's Straits in the mouths of creeks and on structure. Clean water is an imperative, and a lot of fuel can be burned trying to find some. The occasional puppy drum and speckled trout are in the mix.

White perch are now active in the creeks and rivers but can be sluggish in the cool and in windy conditions. Sunny afternoons are best.

The skates (cow nosed rays) are more numerous than normal and can take over large areas, feeding and splashing about. The females give birth and mate before the general population starts out for the Atlantic in mid-summer. Some skate stay in the bay until late fall.

Crabs are on the move in good numbers in the rivers and bay. The creeks are filling up too, but crabs love warm water and won't hit stride until the water gets into the 70's. The winter survey for blue crabs in the bay was excellent indicating very good numbers for all categories of young and mature males and females.

Fresh water fishing is very good for bass, crappie, bluegill, and pickerel.

side Hubert Weatherby of Atlanta, Ga. She was also preceded in death by two children: her son Murdic Kurk Hunter of Orangeburg, S.C. in 1982, and daughter Pamela Miller of Mechanicsville, Md. in 2019.

Betty is survived by her husband, Robert, along with daughters Angella Hunter of Lexington Park, Md., Suzanne Lawrence (Bobby) of Mechanicsville, Md., son-in-law Matthew S. Miller of Mechanicsville, Md., and daughter Victoria Hunter Closson (Lorne) of Lusby, Md.; stepson Mark Trautman (Ben Sifuentes) of Highland Park, N.J., stepdaughters Pamela Trautman Vadeboncoeur of San Miguel, Mexico, and Paula Trautman Ledet (Cliff) of Metarie, La.; 12 grandchildren, 18 great-grandchildren, 3 step-grandchildren, and 5 step-great-grandchildren. Betty is also survived by a sister on her mother's side, Peggy Landers O'Brien of Oklahoma City, Ok., and a sister on her father's side, Patricia Weatherby Pitts of Hampton, Ga. Finally, Betty is survived by former spouse and father of her children, Murdic Hunter of Lexington, S.C.

Betty was a resourceful woman who found a way to make things happen, like starting a pet shop business in the 1960s with five children under 8 years old while her spouse was in the Navy. That business, The Aquarium, was sold in the 70s and locals still remember her from there. She went on to other careers but ultimately settled into homemaking after her marriage to Bob. She and Bob enjoyed horseshoes and bowling in their early years, and decades of travel, fine dining, and Vegas, where Betty would exploit the casinos on the dollar slots. They also loved beach vacations with family. Most called her what her grandchildren named her — Mawmaw, Maw Maw, Mama, MaMaw or some other spelling variation — the consensus of which has been a fun and lively family debate for years. Her generosity didn't stop at material things; it overflowed when it came to her hard-earned wisdom of any topic. Ask anyone who knew her, and they will likely have a colorful story of one of her convictions. Her early years were spent in Georgia and Alabama with her mother's family who nicknamed her Cooter, deeming her slow like the box turtle of the same name. Today, her children still get a kick out of hearing southern relatives call her Cooter in their Alabama drawl. Unfortunately, both Betty's parents died when she was young. She never knew her father, since he died when Betty was a very young child. But she was thrilled to learn at 50+ years old that she had a brother and sister by him, and she was able to meet and establish a relationship with them. She was a fierce matriarch, and we will miss her and appreciate the family that grew from her. She was generous, uniquely beautiful, opinionated and strong-willed, and most who met her remembered her singular personage.

Services will be at Mattingley-Gardiner Funeral Home in Leonardtown, Md. on Tuesday, May 23, with visitation from 9-10 a.m., and prayer service from 10-11 a.m. Interment will follow at All Faith Episcopal Church Cemetery, 38885 New Market Turner Road, Mechanicsville. Attendees are welcome to join the family for a meal and fellowship at the Mechanicsville Volunteer Fire Department at 28165 Hills Club Road following the burial.

The family wishes to extend abundant gratitude to the staff at Hospice of St. Mary's County for their dedicated, compassionate, and exceptional care during Betty's plight with cancer. Betty loved and appreciated the physical and emotional care and friendship the nurses and aides provided. They are a cherished gift to our community.

Memorial contributions in lieu of flowers may be made to Hospice of St. Mary's: P.O. Box 625 Leonardtown, MD 20650.

Leonardtown Is Doing It For The Duck

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

Leonardtown is famous for doing anything it can to bring tourists into town to support local businesses and boost its profile, but this time it may have outdone itself.

Town Administrator Laschelle McKay said this August the Town Wharf will host the World's Largest Rubber Duck.

At 61-feet tall the duck will be the main attraction at a waterfront celebration the town is now planning, McKay said.

"Someone mentioned it to me last year and I thought it was cool," McKay said. "It's got a huge following."

"There are people who drive miles and miles to see it."

She was able to make contact with the owners of the attraction, Craig Samborski and his team, but lost track of them for months, McKay said, until recently when they agreed to make an appearance in town.

McKay said the duck would be in town for three days, it would essentially be a First Friday event all weekend long.

"I'm very excited about it," she said. "It's a big draw for visitors."

"Most people I've talked to are really excited about it, too."

The last time the attraction was on the East Coast, she said, was in 2019.

Lately it has been seen in places like Detroit, Michigan and Two Harbors, Minnesota.

Samborski is a major events promoter who has often worked to bring tall ships to various locales around the country; he had the World's Largest Rubber Duck constructed in 2014.

Samborski said years ago he was in Los Angeles promoting a tall ships festival when a friend of his told him what he was doing would not be enough.

"He said I needed to go big or go home," Samborski said. "He said I needed to build the world's largest rubber duck."

Samborski contracted with builders who had specialized in working with balloons who then used inflatables for advertising and the 8-ton, 64-foot wide, 74-foot long duck was born.

"It's just so big, you can't miss it," Samborski said. "You forget all your troubles when you see her; it just exudes happiness and joy."

"She's a big girl."

California Man Charged in Road Rage Incidents

A 32-year-old California man was arrested and charged by St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office Patrol deputies on Tuesday, May 16, 2023, following two road rage incidents involving two separate drivers.

Eric Michael Davis, age 32 of California, was charged with two counts of First-Degree Assault, two counts of Second-Degree Assault and two counts of Firearm Use in a Violent Crime.

On Tuesday, May 16, 2023, at 4:48 pm, DFC Max Schell responded to the area of Three Notch Road and Patuxent Beach Road in California for the report of a man who had pointed a firearm at a victim. The victim advised while driving home from work on Three Notch Road at the intersection of Shady Mile Drive, a man in a green truck in the next lane pointed a gun at the victim.

Upon investigation with the assistance of the Criminal Investigations Division, Sheriff's Office deputies responded to Davis' address and located the 2000 Ford F-150 truck described by the victim.

Earlier on Tuesday, at 2:22 pm, the St. Mary's County Emergency Communications Center received a separate complaint of a man in a green truck driving erratically in the area of Patuxent Beach Road. The vehicle began speeding around the two victims in their car and eventually traveled to the passenger side and hit the brakes, provoking an altercation. The passenger looked over and observed Davis pointing a black handgun straight in the air. The victims hit their brakes to elude Davis.

The investigation by Deputy Joseph Senatore determined that both incidents were connected.

Davis is in custody at the St. Mary's County Detention and Rehabilitation Center in Leonardtown where he is being held without bond pending a hearing.

How Digital Twins Can Impact Naval Aviation

Naval Air Systems Command's Airborne Electronic Attack Systems Program Office (PMA-234) is turning to digital technology to improve readiness, explore new capabilities and expedite training.

PMA-234 is in the early stages of using digital twins, which are virtual models designed to reflect a physical object accurately. PMA-234 has developed digital twin technology with an industry partner for the past six months.

The program office selected the pod interface unit on the ALQ-99 Tactical Jamming System (TJS), first used in the 1970s, as the initial capability on which to test the new technology. The jamming system is unique as an older technology that converts analog signals to digital signals. By using an older system, the team members can test the bounds of their creativity and exploration.

"We wanted to prove to ourselves we could take an existing piece of hardware and develop a digital twin that would be useful," said Capt. David Rueter, PMA-234 program manager. "We picked something fairly easy as a starting point."

Digital twin technology can enable the sustainment, upgrade and evolution of systems over time.

"From a capability perspective, if I have a digital model of a system that requires improved processing, I can now figure out what that upgrade is and test it out digitally before I even purchase new hardware," said Rueter.

The commercial industry has used digital twin technology for some time. For example, many new cell phones were developed digitally in a lab before consumers could purchase them.

"There are multiple uses for digital twins, including designing, troubleshooting, simulating and enhancing. Digital twins replicate the real-world performance and have a huge utility," said PMA-234 Chief Engineer Christie Agamaite, who leads the program office's digital twin efforts.

She explained how a digital twin can aid in troubleshooting.

"There is a plethora of signals from a platform and an integrated system; if you are using a digital twin, you can vary those signals at myriad different rates and see the resultant behaviors in real-time," said Agamaite. "The resultant behaviors are where we find the problems."

The digital twin approach provides the Naval Aviation Enterprise with increased resiliency, efficiency, adaptability and autonomy to accelerate learning on old and new systems.

Rear Adm. John Lemmon spearheaded the idea of using digital twin technology during his tenure as Commander of Naval Air Warfare Center Aircraft Division (NAWCAD). This initiative invested in workforce development to apply "Get Real, Get Better" principles to utilize technology to benefit the warfighter.

Now, according to Rueter, the program office is providing subject matter experts to build the twin. It hopes to boost readiness as the NAWCAD workforce learns from this endeavor.

The potential future benefits of digital twinning expand to more capabilities. For example, digital twin provides massive learning potential to work with Airborne Electronic Attack systems.

Furthermore, Agamaite explains that "digital twins can benefit maintainers. By building a virtual model of a capability and using virtual reality goggles, technicians can touch and feel the system virtually. This will quickly increase the learning curve by starting the training earlier. It puts you virtually in the world before you get the hardware in your hands."

My office will continue prosecuting these cases vigorously; we are committed to defending our children." Sterling went on to say, "These types of cases are difficult and complicated, and I want to extend my thanks and appreciation to the jury for their time and attention during the trial."

Crab Population Shows Some Improvement

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

As the summer months approach the state is reporting that the hard crab population is improving after last year's dredge survey showed that crab populations were at a historic low point.

The latest results from the annual winter dredge survey project that there are 323 million blue crabs in the Chesapeake Bay in 2023; last year's low count was just 227 million.

This was the lowest overall number in 33 years.

The number of spawning age female crabs had a hopeful increase from 97 million crabs in 2022 to 152 million this year; the state reported this is well above the management threshold of 72.5 million spawning age female crabs to maintain the overall species.

Adult male crab numbers also showed improvement with the population increasing from 28 million to 55 million crabs this year.

"We are encouraged by the increases in adult crab abundance, but we need to be vigilant given the ongoing low recruitment numbers," said Maryland Department of Natural Resources Fishing and Boating Services Acting Director Lynn Fegley. "We haven't seen a strong year class since 2019 despite maintaining the spawning stock at a level capable of producing one."

But the total number of juvenile crabs in the watershed shared by both Maryland and Virginia, who worked together on the survey, are still troubling.

The state reports that the number of juvenile crabs in the Chesapeake Bay has been below average for the past four years with the 2023 estimate at 116 million crabs, just a slight increase from 101 million juvenile crabs in 2022.

Chris Moore, the Chesapeake Bay Foundation's chief ecosystem scientist said the numbers were encouraging but still below the targets to ensure a healthy, growing crab population.

"While this year's numbers show some signs of recovery in the bay's blue crab population, there is still plenty of cause for caution," Moore said. "Because the blue crab population fluctuates annually due to a variety of factors, we hope the improvements observed this year continue over the long term."

Both states should consider strict limits on the harvesting of the crustacean, the foundation contended.

"Due to continued low numbers of male crabs, both states should, at a minimum, maintain measures put in place last year that sought to protect male crabs," Moore said. "States should also consider additional actions, including pot tagging, which assists in the enforcement of blue crab fishery regulations."

"Although both states currently have limits on the number of pots watermen can set, these numbers are largely unenforceable, leading to numerous concerns about the amount of crabbing gear in the water; pot tagging would help the states enforce these limits."

Commissioners Approve $318M Operating Budget

Commissioner Scott Ostrow

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

The Commissioners of St. Mary's County voted unanimously this week to pass a $318 million operating budget that brings in more property and income taxes than the current fiscal 2023 and promises to bring in more revenue in excise taxes for new construction.

Property tax rates remain the same but revenues are increasing because of increased assessments statewide to $130.4 million; the income tax remains at 3 percent but revenues in that category are increasing as well to $137.8 million in fiscal 2024.

The county currently holds an unassigned general fund balance — essentially unspent taxpayer funds — of $36.8 million.

The budget also represents an expansion of government; it includes 33 new positions to go to nearly all county departments from Aging and Human Services to Emergency Services.

The Board of Education received $128 million in local allocation funds while the sheriff's office received 61.9 million; the county's various other departments got a total $79.2 million.

"I think we've put forward a very good budget," said Commissioner Scott Ostrow, who just two weeks earlier voted to institute the new excise tax at maximum levels. "We tried to do the absolute best we could for the citizens."

During the debate over the excise tax several weeks ago, Commission Eric Colvin pushed for it to be lowered by 70 percent upon its institution, which he said would still generate a small amount of extra revenue.

Only Commissioner Mike Alderson voted to support Colvin's motion.

The new excise tax is expected to bring in an additional $3.9 million

Ostrow touted the commissioners' decision prior the vote of May 23 to lower the energy tax by one-half.

"That's something real and tangible people are going to be able to see and feel in their budgets," Ostrow said.

The annual projected revenue collected from the energy tax is just $1.6 million.

Colvin said he was still pleased with the overall budget process.

"Every commissioner had some items they were passionate about that made it into the budget and some items they were disappointed about that made it into the budget," Colvin said. "But we still worked together and we all agreed at the end of the day to create a strong budget."

Health Department Seeks Long COVID Data

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

The national health emergency for COVID-19 is over, said County Health Office Dr. Meena Brewster this week, but the health department still wants to know more about the long-term effects the disease.

Speaking before the Commissioners of St. Mary's County, sitting as the Board of Health, at their May 23 meeting, Brewster said future briefings would expand to other topics beyond the pandemic.

"COVID-19 continues to be a serious public health issue around the globe and here locally," Brewster said, noting that residents could take a brief, anonymous survey on-line at the health department's webpage on how COVID continues to affect their health.

"What it allows us to do is get a better sense of what the impacts are of long COVID," Brewster continued.

About 40 percent of respondents worldwide who have been infected with COVID reported still suffering from symptoms about four months after the initial infection waned, Brewster said.

Those symptoms include shortness of breath, neurological problems such as difficulty focusing or "brain fog," and fatigue.

"These are our very real concerns," she told commissioners. "We're continuing to deal with a certain portion of the population that are still experiencing symptoms."

Factors that contribute to a person experiencing long COVID include diabetes, obesity, advanced age or other co-morbidities.

Those who have a history of vaccinations, she said, had a lower chance of experiencing post COVID symptoms.

Death Investigation Underway in Mechanicsville

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

St. Mary's County Sheriff's Office detectives are investigating the death of a white male found in an apartment May 24 in the 29000 block of Three Notch Road.

Sheriff's officials told The County Times that the decedent, who has yet to be identified, was killed by a single gunshot to the head.

Jason Babcock, sheriff's office spokesperson, said there are no charges pending at this point as the investigation into the death is continuing.

The sheriff's office has individuals in custody, he said, and interviews are being conducted.

New Veterans Home Management Company Has Troubled History

By Guy Leonard
Staff Writer

A Georgia-based health care provider has been awarded the $159 million contract to run the troubled Charlotte Hall Veterans Home for the next four years by the state's Board of Public Works — but PruittHealth has problems of its own, according to Medicare reports on its operations.

Federal government records show that of the 49 nursing homes in Georgia the health care conglomerate runs, 16 have a one-star rating — the lowest rating — that Medicare can provide based on health inspections, staffing and quality measures the management company institutes in its operations.

Two of those facilities, known as Eastside and Toccoa, were cited for abuse, the Medicare reports state.

PruittHealth operates nursing homes in North and South Carolina and Florida as well.

The same reporting system shows that four out of 10 nursing homes it runs in North Carolina have a one-star rating with two of them being cited for abuse.

In South Carolina four out of 14 nursing homes were given a one-star rating as well.

In Florida, PruittHealth runs just four nursing homes and one of them has a one-star rating.

Gov. Wes Moore announced in March that he would be cancelling the contract with RMH, the management company that had run the Charlotte Hall Veterans Home since 2002 based on reports of poor patient care and even abuse both from Medicare and resident complaints.

The veterans' home, which is the only one in Maryland, also received a one-star rating.

The issue resulted in emergency legislation being passed in the last days of the 2023 General Assembly that required state legislators and local elected leaders be notified if a nursing home in their jurisdiction was given such a low rating or noted to have problems of abuse or neglect of their patients.

When Moore announced that the RMH contract would be terminated, local elected officials and at the state level said they had not been informed of the abuse and neglect allegations at the veterans' home.

If the new management company takes on a fifth year running Charlotte Hall it will receive an additional $39 million.

In a statement on the hiring of PruittHealth, the state exhibited confidence in its choice.

"PruittHealth is a family-owned organization and manages more than 105 nursing homes and six veterans' homes throughout Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, and South Carolina," the statement reads.

"Ten of their locations were recently recognized as a Best Nursing Home for 2022-23 by U.S. News & World Report.

"All the veterans' homes under PruittHealth management are recipients of The Joint Commission's Gold Seal of Approval for meeting the highest safety and quality health care standards."

The state veterans' affairs office is working with the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs, Maryland Department of Health, and St. Mary's County Health Department to ensure a smooth transition from the current management contractor to the new one, the statement said.

Staffing at Charlotte Hall has been a long-standing problem that the state said the new management company is willing to handle.

"PruittHealth is committed to retaining as much staff as possible during this transition, ensuring that nursing staff are able to maintain relationships with their residents and patients," the state said. "PruittHealth will take over management of Charlotte Hall on June 6."

PruittHealth is also engaged in providing home health services for clients and several years ago it was implicated in a federal false claims case.

PruittHealth agreed to pay $4.2 million to "resolve allegations that they submitted claims for home health services that were not covered by the Medicare and Medicaid programs, and that they failed to refund overpayments that they had received from Medicare and Medicaid in a timely manner," according to the U.S. Attorney's Office, Northern District of Georgia from 2021.

The government alleged in that case that from 2011 through 2012, Pruitt knowingly submitted claims to Medicare and Medicaid for home health services that were not eligible for reimbursement because, among other things, they did not have the required face-to-face certifications or plans of care, and they did not document the beneficiary's homebound status or need for the home health services. The prosecutors also alleged that Pruitt learned that it had received payments for home health services to which it was not entitled, but failed to disclose those receipt of the overpayments, or refund the overpayments to Medicare and Medicaid as it should have.

Del. Matt Morgan (R-District 29A) said

the state was keeping close tabs on the current situation at the veterans' home as the transition moves ahead.

"I believe [Veterans] Secretary [Anthony] Woods' team has a good plan moving forward," Morgan said after a meeting he had with Sen. Jack Bailey at the veterans home this week. "They have several people from the Department [of Veterans Affairs] living at Charlotte Hall over the next month to be hands-on and handle any problems that may come up."

Bailey said the nursing staff at Charlotte Hall employed by the prior management company were "90 percent agency care workers."

That was not the case when it came to the incoming management company, he said.

"They were not long-term employees," Bailey continued. "They [PruittHealth] have no day employees in long-term health care."

"The same person who is treating them on Monday should be treating them on Friday."
